

Chi-X Australia Finalises Arrangements for Clearing and Settlement

SYDNEY — 20 June 2011 — Chi-X Australia, a wholly-owned subsidiary of alternative trading venue operator Chi-X Global Inc., today announced that it has finalised arrangements for trades executed on its market to be cleared and settled.

Chi-X Australia has lodged an application to receive the ASX's Trade Acceptance Service and has selected interface technology specialist SecuritEase to supply the gateway to the clearing and settlement infrastructure operated by ASX. The Trade Acceptance Service was developed so that trades executed on the trading platforms of other market operators can be passed to ASX Clear and ASX Settlement in real-time for clearing and settlement.

Commenting on the application, Peter Fowler, Chief Operating Officer of Chi-X Australia, said: "We have fulfilled our key objective in negotiations with ASX of ensuring that all market participants have an equitable post-trade service, regardless of execution venue. We have chosen to apply for the five year pricing option as this has the advantage of spreading the costs imposed by ASX over a longer period. Importantly, the arrangement will not lock Chi-X into exclusively using ASX for the duration of this period."

Commenting on the appointment of SecuritEase to provide the key connectivity components that allow trade details to be sent from the Chi-X platform to the Trade Acceptance Service, Peter Fowler said: "We are delighted with the relationship we have established with SecuritEase and the speed and quality of their work in building the interface to ASX's systems. The strong support we have received from key vendors and Australian market participants provides further evidence of the desire that exists in the Australian market for competition and the benefits a multiple market environment will deliver."
